“Broken dreams” sounds so hollow. There’s something you desperately want but can’t have. Is there purpose in your pain? Sheridan Voysey—a man who walked through the wilderness—says “yes.” He makes a comparison of the Jews’ biblical wilderness journey to the wilderness we find ourselves in when we are empty and desperately asking God, “Why?” God uses these times to teach us about ourselves and reveal Himself to us. So even when God says “no,” you can trust that He will walk with you during your darkest moments and offer His hope for your future.
