Crimes of Magic: The Yard Sale Wand by Richard L. King

Portland Private Investigator Rachel Chase and her associate Professor Robert Walker are hired to prove that an antiques dealer is innocent of killing her husband and business partner while alone together in a locked room. Is this murder related to magical jade artifacts smuggled out of China? A powerful magician seems to think so, and he is pursuing Rachel and the Professor. Before their investigation even begins, Rachel and the Professor stumble across a magic wand with a power that proves to be integral to solving the case. A touch of humor, a growing affection, a dose of magic, an element of danger, a bit of action, and a lot of sleuthing combine to make a modern, urban cozy mystery.

Length: 74,300 words, approximately 275 pages.

This is the third book in the Crimes of Magic series. The first book is Crimes of Magic: The Witch's Artifact. The second book is Crimes of Magic: The Wizard's Sphere. It is best to read the first book first.
