Whales are not fish; they are mammals and like humans they need air to breathe, they don't have gills like fish. They give birth to live babies that even have hair. A baby whale is called a calf.

Their nostrils are called blowholes and are found on their back. This is where air comes in and out when they breathe. They have to keep their blowhole above the surface when sleeping. The fat that keeps them warm is called the blubber.

They come in different shapes and sizes. They also love to sing because it is their way to communicate and have fun. There are scientists who have said that these large and intelligent mammals once walked on Earth and over thousands of years of evolution they lost their legs and learned how to find food and rest underwater. Some whales can stay underwater for around 90 minutes.

Let us introduce you to the wonderful world of some of the most interesting mammals that live in the ocean, whales, enjoy this ebook.
