Somewhere Lies the Moon (Too Deep for Tears Trilogy Book 3) Kathryn Lynn Davis

“Excellent...Provocative and emotionally intense.”

--Rendevous

“Populated by characters infused with a mystical quality that permeates the entire book...Davis’ latest is an intricately woven tale of how each generation influences the next.”

--Booklist

“Another masterpiece...A powerful conclusion for a powerful trilogy of fiction.”

--All About Romance

Four generations of Scottish Highland women live in Glen Affric. Their stories intersect through Ena Rose—barely past childhood, not yet a woman—who faces choices she cannot understand, and a love that may never fulfill her dreams. Ailsa Rose is content in her familiar home, until she finally recognizes the turmoil she has refused to see, the pain she knows not how to heal. She calls out across the world to her half sisters: Wan Lian, struggling to outlive the shadows of her past in a small country town in France; and Genevra, back in India, searching for her future among the multi-colored patterns engraved in her soul. Together again in their Glen Affric sanctuary, they learn that they are strong enough to face any challenge...as long as they hold on to one another.

“SOMEWHERE LIES THE MOON will make you think and perhaps change some [part of] yourself. This is not just Ena’s story, but a story for all women who have been searching for answers throughout time. -- Romantic Times

“The most intriguing intimacies in the book are among women...It dispenses words of wisdom about mothers and daughters...[and] women’s power to forgive.”

--Publishers Weekly
