Zane is a warrior with a single purpose—to protect one of the women who can defeat Apep, a nasty god hell-bent on destruction. For millennia, he's watched and waited for the right female, never loving, barely living. Then he meets Delilah. She's beautiful and brave and half insane with the visions and voices that plague her. She's the one. Zane knows he should pay more attention to the coming battle, but he's never wanted anyone the way he wants Delilah.

Torn between fear and desire, Delilah doesn't know what to believe when Zane tells her all the visions are real, that there's a hidden world where gods and goddesses plot against each other—and that she has a role to play. But it's the passion she feels for Zane that concerns her most. She doesn't know how she'll save the world when she can't tear herself away from his arms, his taste, his touch...
