Aaron Brown was every girl's fantasy. The biggest rock star in the country, women would line up for hours just to catch a glimpse of his face, and his posters were pinned up above every girl's bed. He had everything: money, fame, a spot on People's Sexiest Celebrities, and a mansion in Beverly Hills.

And then he vanished from the limelight.

Lily Parker has lived her whole life in Burns Bog. Bubbly and talkative, she works for her dad's moving company, and he's put her in charge of the biggest move in Burns Bog history. The client? A grouchy, quiet, bearded man moving into a beautiful house on a massive lot on the edge of town.

She's never met him before, so why does he seem so familiar?

Then, she hears his voice. Lily knows exactly who he is. He's Aaron Brown, her teen idol, her favourite musician of all time - but she needs to keep quiet. After all, the only reason to move to a town that small is to not be recognized.

Can Lily keep a secret from the town? More importantly, can she keep a secret from the rock legend himself? It's easier said than done—especially when things start heating up between the small town girl and the famed heartthrob.

Oh, and in case things weren't complicated enough, Lily catches the eye of another man, a football star who will stop at nothing to get what he wants.
